ORIGINAL OPENING:	August 12, 1955
OWNERSHIP HISTORY:	After scouting the ideal plot of land in 1943, distinguished hotelier Conrad Hilton hired Del E. Webb in 1953 to build his flagship hotel on the West Coast. The official opening was August 12, 1955. Owned by Merv Griffin from 1987 to 2003, Beny Alagem and Oasis West Realty LLC purchased the 569-room hotel in 2003 and immediately embarked on a spectacular $80 million renovation, which was completed in 2008. Since then, an additional $19 million in refresh updates have been made. In May 2019, the hotel began its transformation journey to ensure it lives on for years to come with a $30 million hotel refresh which will include guestrooms, CIRCA 55 Restaurant, and the Lobby. The Beverly Hilton has hosted United States Presidents and royalty from John F. Kennedy and Ronald Reagan to the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge. The hotel has welcomed heads of state, international business leaders and renowned Hollywood celebrities.
DESIGN:	The Beverly Hilton is instantly recognizable with its retro exterior – a nod to its mid-century architectural style. Conrad Hilton tapped renowned architect Welton Beckett (other projects include Capitol Records, The Music Center and LA Memorial Sports Arena) to design the hotel. While the exterior has stayed true to its roots, the interior and guest rooms have undergone several significant design updates to suit the modern discerning traveler. The icon of The Beverly Hilton is a starburst – a symbol of space and freedom. Originally mounted over the grand staircase in the main lobby, this symbol was personified by a magnificent sculptured Starburst weighing 500 pounds and stretching to 15 feet, created by famed artist Bernard Rosenthal. Today, a portion of the original sculpture remains on display in The Oasis Courtyard.

A STORIED HISTORY:

In 1953, construction began on the nearly 9-acre property as Conrad Hilton and film star Terry Moore turned over the first shovelful of earth.

On the night of the opening gala in 1955, uniformed Herald trumpeters greeted guests with a regal fanfare as pink-painted elephants, escorted by bathing suit beauties, circled the main entrance of the hotel.

As the first luxury hotel to have air-conditioning thermostats in each room, guests were abuzz with the power to “control the weather” during their hotel stays at The Beverly Hilton. The Beverly Hilton was also the first hotel to install high-speed elevators with then-new technology called “Amplidyne,” which regulates the flow of power so that the elevators function so smoothly that movement is “barely perceptible.”

Esther Williams, film star and swimmer extraordinaire officially inaugurated The Beverly Hilton's Aqua Star Pool (the largest in Beverly Hills) by swimming through white gardenias with three of her swim students. The hotel's ground-floor nightclub, the Bali Room (now the International Ballroom), was so versatile that its beautiful jeweled stage and dance floor could be converted to an ice skating rink when the occasion called for it.

where his pal Frank Sinatra rounded up a host of celebrities including Milton Berle, Janet Leigh, Tony Curtis, Judy Garland, Mort Sahl and the entire 'Jack Pack' to mingle with the crowd of 2,800 supporters. By the time Judy Garland began her second number, the crowd had filled two separate ballrooms to capacity.

In October of 1988, the Cary Grant family chose The Beverly Hilton – one of the actor's favorite hangouts – to host a one-time-only tribute to Cary Grant. Hollywood insiders, Monaco royalty and dozens of legendary entertainers (including Frank Sinatra, Liza Minnelli and Burt Lancaster) came out to celebrate their personal connections to both Cary Grant and Princess Grace (Grace Kelly).

Along with First Lady Maria Shriver and a small group of 60 friends, Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger celebrated his 58th birthday in July of 2005 with a California-shaped cake specially designed by The Beverly Hilton's executive pastry chef.
